PART ELEVEN - PERSONNEL EVALUATION

Segment I - The Role of Evaluation

A. Introduction

- of personnel by their supervisors or others who are familiar with their work performance. The evaluations are recorded on prescribed forms in accordance with specified procedures, become a part of the personnel records of individuals, and are available for use in connection with possible personnel actions. (Tiffin & McCormick, p. 223) Although this segment is concerned primarily with the formal aspects of personnel evaluation, the leader must think of evaluation as a continuing process of observing and appraising the performance of his subordinates in everyday work situations. The formal evaluations, the recording of appraisals on prescribed forms, the discussions with the subordinates—all of these are the culmination of these continuing observations.
- 2. Purpose of Evaluation: The selection for promotion, duty assignments, and education programs (postgraduate school, Armed Forces, Staff College, etc.) Pigors & Myers, 0.390)
- 3. Formal Appraisals (Pigors & Myers, pp.390-391)
 - a. Used to reduce favoritism and snap judgments in personnel decisions
 - b. Although formal appraisals are normally subjective (qualitative) they are not a substitute for objective (quantitative) records (output, quality, etc.) which might be available. (Morgan, pp. 573-575)
- 4. Importance of Evaluations to the Navy (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 179)
 - a. Favorable evaluations provide the incentive and recognition that should retain personnel in the service, while disfavorable evaluations may tend to eliminate the poor performer and encourage the marginal to greater effort.
 - b. Evaluation provides the basis for future personnel action.
 - 1) Duty assignments
 - 2) Selection for promotion of those best fit for assuming increased responsibility

- 3) Determine the need for correction of individual deficiencies
- 4) Eliminate unfit personnel
- c. The Naval officer corps, enlisted personnel, and civilian employes are all part of an organizational structure which forms a pyramid. Since "all cannot reach the top", some systematic and just evaluation method is required.
- 5. Terms related to evaluation (Wolfe, pp. 76-77)
 - a. Performance
 - 1) What a man does, his actual behavior or output
 - b. Ability
 - 1) What a man is able to do. Although performance may be the only way of viewing ability, it has a connotation of what he could do now. An example might be a track star whose current sprained ankle inhibits the performance of his ability.

c. Aptitude

1) What a man's future or potential abilities and performance are. This term is usually applied before an individual receives training.

d. Achievement

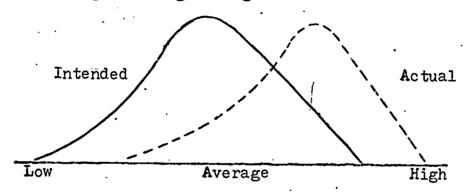

1) What a man's past performance or evaluated performance has been.

B. Characteristics of Evaluations

- 1. Concepts of validity and reliability (Hays & Thomas, pp. 70-71)
 - a. Validity is the degree to which evaluations are truly indicative of the subordinate. How well do they actually measure what they are intended to measure?
 - b. Reliability refers to the consistency of the evaluations. In other words, reliable evaluation techniques will produce consistent results regardless of time or the particular evaluator.
- 2. Errors in evaluations (Hays & Thomas, pp. 69-70)
 - a. Since evaluation reports are essentially subjective, the following types of human errors tend to appear.

- 1) Halo effect The tendency to allow a single good trait to influence all other marks favorably, or vice versa for a bad trait
- 2) Constant error The tendency to give all subordinates high marks if you are lenient, or to give all subordinates low marks if you are tough
- 3) Generosity error This is the general tendency to rate high, making it difficult to distinguish between personnel at the top. This may stem from giving the men "the benefit of the doubt."
- b. The result of the three errors discussed above may shift the distribution of the ratings toward the high end, i.e., the mode of actual distribution may be well above average performance. To what population does the "average" rating belong?

C. Advantage of Evaluations

- 1. Formalized evaluations force supervisors to analytically and carefully review the performance of their men. (Pigors & Myers, p. 393)
- 2. Some method of formal appraisal (i.e., officer fitness report) is required, since informal judgments cannot be defended against charges of partiality or personal bias on the part of the evaluator. (Pigors & Myers, p. 398)
- 3. Evaluations are particularly valuable when they are the result of careful review by several people who know the individual's work. Assign the responsibility for preparation and review of "rough" reports to all the appropriate people in your organization. (Pigors & Myers, p. 62)
- 4. With reference to seniority as a criterion for promotions, management should have defensible reasons for departing from seniority.

a. How much weight should seniority carry in decisions of promotion? (Pigors & Myers, p. 398)

Promotion Example

Lt. Fuller is faced with the problem of recommending one man for a promotion. He has two men who have met all the necessary requirements, but he must choose only one. Based on the information presented below, which one of the two men do you believe Lt. Fuller should select?

Personnel Data	Scott	Dinkel
Age Years of Navy Experience Intelligence Education 2 Performance Evaluation (average)	22 2 High Years of Colleg	30 12 Average High School 3.2

- 5. Supervisors may fool themselves by believing that day-to-day contact with subordinates will make them aware of the merit of their performance. A leader is often shocked to hear a subordinate say, "I was unaware that my performance was poor." (Pigors & Myers, p. 61)
- 6. Evaluations help superiors prepare adequately for the periodic discussions on performance which he should have with each of his subordinates. (Pigors & Myers, p. 57)
- D. Limitations or Disadvantages of Evaluations (Pigors & Myers, p. 394)
 - 1. There may exist a reluctance on the part of supervisors to take adequate time and thought to prepare adequate appraisals.
 - 2. Overly detailed evaluation forms may prove too formidable and may overemphasize small details. Attempt to use simpler forms whenever practical. Supervisors are more likely to complete them in a satisfactory manner.
 - 3. In the absence of expected standards of performance, evaluations are open to the criticism that they are too subjective.
 - 4. Periodic evaluations should not become a substitute for constant "coaching", which should exist between superior and subordinate. (Pigors & Myers, p. 398)

- E. Alternatives to Present Evaluation Methods (Pigors & Myers, p. 398)
 - 1. Non-systematic appraisals
 - a. Informal judgment: This method may be easier but it allows human frailties to enter the picture and does not present a consistent base for evaluation.
 - b. Seniority as the sole criterion: This method has obvious disadvantages to management, in that there is less assurance that the organization is maximizing its performance potential.

2. Conclusion

- a. Presently, no adequate alternative to a systematic and uniform method of evaluation exists, if management wants to avoid charges of discrimination or arbitrary action.
- b. In absence of the development of an optimum system or a better system evaluation, the present approaches are the best alternative.

F. Discussion of Evaluation Reports With Personnel

- 1. Purposes for discussion
 - a. Each man has a right to know how he is doing at his work and where he stands in the organization.

 (Pigors & Myers, p. 393)
 - b. Discussions can provide an opportunity for seniors and subordinates to review the possible causes of subordinate ratings which are relatively lower than anticipated, particularly if these conditions have not been discussed previously. (Pigors & Myers, p. 62)
 - c. To recognize good performance (Tiffin & McCormick, pp. 262-264)
 - d. To warn some employes that they must do better and to point out how and where they can attempt to improve (Tiffin & McCormick, pp. 262-264)
- 2. Difficulty of discussions (Pigors & Myers, p. 57-61)
 - a. Face-to-face talks may be the hardest part of a leader's job, and they may rate high in avoidance.

- b. Supervisors may be willing to go through the paperwork, but can fail badly at having to tell another man how he stands or what he needs to do to improve himself.
- 3. Procedure for discussions (Pigors & Myers, p. 62)
 - a. Begin with the strong points and then continue with the areas in which improvement is needed.
 - b. A superior should learn to be a good listener and may also benefit from the discussion.
- 4. Techniques for discussions (Tiffin & McCormick, pp. 262)
 - a. Tell and sell
 - 1) Good with insecure and inexperienced personnel
 - 2) Risk of stifling upward communication
 - b. Tell and listen
 - 1) Considers subordinates feelings
 - 2) Usually no constructive solution
 - c. Problem-solving
 - 1) Develop a constructive problem-solving approach in the subordinate.
 - 2) Establish a mutual interest between superior and subordinate, i.e., management by mutually established objectives.
 - 3) This approach is well expressed by Douglas McGregor. (McGregor, p. 91-92)

"Effective development of managers does not include coercing them (no matter how benevolently) into acceptance of the goals of the enterprise, nor does it mean manipulating their behavior to suit organizational needs. Rather, it calls for creating a relationship within which a man can take responsibility for developing his own potentials, plan for himself, and learn from putting his plans into action. In the process he can gain a genuine sense of satisfaction, for he is utilizing his own capabilities to achieve simultaneously both his objectives and those of the organization. Unless this is the nature of the relationship, development becomes a euphemism."

ENLISTED PERFORMANCE EVALUATION

- A. Introduction (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 186)
 - 1. The Chief of Naval Personnel has the responsibility for overall administration of enlisted personnel.
 - 2. The administration of personnel performance evaluation is normally delegated to commanding officers and officers in charge.
 - 3. Evaluation reports provide a permanent chronological appraisal of personnel performance.
- B. Purposes of Enlisted Performance Evaluations (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 186)
 - 1. To determine eligibility for reenlistment, honorable discharge, or award of the Good Conduct Medal
 - 2. To permit COs to positively influence the advancement opportunity of outstanding individuals
 - 3. To assist various boards in their selection of personnel for advancement, appointment to commissioned status, and assignment to special duties and educational programs

C. Basis for Measurement

- 1. Evaluation of personnel is a continuous process based on day-to-day performance.
 - a. Although the enlisted evaluation form only lists the following items for performance evaluation, the rating officer must consider many interrelated factors when arriving at an objective and fair evaluation.
 - 1) Professional performance
 - 2) Military behavior
 - 3) Leadership and supervisory ability
 - 4) Military appearance
 - 5) Adaptability

- 2. Individuals within a pay grade are evaluated against the performance of others in the same pay grade
- D. Preparation of Evaluation Report (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 187)
 - 1. Enlisted performance evaluations fall into two categories: regular and special. The former are submitted at regular intervals and submission dates vary by pay grade. The latter are used to update for special reports the performance data currently on file. On the next page there is a copy of the NAVPERS 792 form used for both types of evaluation reports. The detailed requirements are listed in the BuPers Manual for the regular and special evaluation reports.
 - 2. Commanding officers are responsible for the final evaluation of enlisted personnel.
 - 3. The initial "rough" evaluation should be made by the appropriate petty officer and reviewed by the division officer and department head.
 - 4. Each evaluation should be based objectively upon the individual's abilities and performance as compared to established standards and the performance of the man's contemporaries. (BuPers Manual, C7821)
 - 5. Any area where the man's performance is judged "extremely effective" or "inadequate" must be justified by written comment.

INTRODUCTION TO PSYCHOLOGY AND LEADERSHIP

Segment III
Officer Evaluation

WESTINGHOUSE LEARNING CORPORATION

Annapolis, Maryland

PART ELEVEN - PERSONNEL EVALUATION

Segment III - Officer Evaluation

A. Introduction (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 179)

- 1. The Secretary of the Navy is responsible for decisions on officer promotions, discharges, and retirements.
- 2. Administration of officer personnel is closely controlled by federal law. (Officer Personnel Act of 1947) (NAVPERS 10848-D, pp. 12-13)
- 3. Administrative procedures have been developed concerning the evaluation of officer personnel to implement the federal law. (BuPers Manual, B2203)

B. Fitness Report

- 1. Importance: Efficiency reports are necessary for evaluating the relative merits of officers of the same experience.
 (Ageton & Mack, pp. 209-210)
- 2. Purpose: Fitness reports provide a running report for selection boards and guidance for detail officers. They serve the following specific purposes:
 - a. Show duties performed.
 - b. Show manner of duties performed.
 - c. Show qualities of leadership.
 - d. Provide record of current qualifications.
 - e. Provide opinion of officer's all-around ability and value.
 - f. Show professional qualifications and qualifications for promotion.
 - g. Show commendatory or disciplinary action taken.
 - h. Show general state of health and personal characteristics. (Ageton & Mack, pp. 209-210)
- 3. Since fitness reports are the primary basis for selecting officers for promotion and assignment, it is essential that reporting seniors provide realistic objective evaluations. The failure to perform this obligation is an injustice to the careers and opportunities of the able and competent. (NAVPERS 10848-D, pp. 179-180)

4. The fitness report seeks to obtain the reporting senior's opinion of the characteristics of the officer reported on, both as an individual considered separately and as a member of a group having comparable age, status, and experience. (NAVPERS 10848-D, pp. 179-180)

C. Leadership Evaluation Factors (Hays & Thomas, pp. 62-63)

1. A summary of leadership literature by Ralph M. Stogdill concludes that there are six factors associated with leadership.

a. Capacity

- 1) Mental ability correlates consistently with leadership; intelligence tests are a reliable prediction for leadership selection.
- 2) Intelligence testing is used to a limited degree in the Navy. Therefore, a subjective evaluation of an officer's alertness, verbal facility, originality, or judgment is often used to inferintelligence.

b. Achievement

- 1) Easier variable to measure since an individual's past accomplishments are a matter of record.
- 2) Such things as educational achievement, special skill, and athletic accomplishments are considered.

c. Responsibility

- 1) The measure of responsibility is derived from an intimate knowledge of his performance.
- 2) The traits often used to measure responsibility are:
 - a) Dependability.
 - b) Initiative.
 - c) Persistence.
 - d) Aggressiveness.
 - e) Self-confidence.
 - f) Desire to excel.

(Note: The above terms are closely associated with the terminology used in the officer's fitness report, NAVPERS 310)

d. Participation

- 1) Best measured subjectively by close association with the individual
- 2) Traits used to measure participation
 - a) Sociability
 - b) Adaptability
 - c) Spirit of cooperation
 - d) Sense of humor

e. Status

- 1) Degree of participation in social interaction
- 2) In a military organization, status is closely related to rank, and in that sense, status is objective and easy to measure.

f. Situation

- 1) The characteristics of the group being led are a part of the situation. An awareness of the follower's mental level, status, skills, needs, and interests becomes significant.
- 2) The objectives to be achieved should be considered. A commander must determine which type of leader is best suited for a particular leadership task involving a certain group with a given mission.

D. Responsibility for Fitness Reports

- 1. Responsibility is shared by the officer reported on and his reporting senior; the former for submitting his portion of the form to his senior, and the latter for submitting the completed report to the Chief of Naval Personnel. (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 180)
- 2. Advice for reporting officers (Ageton & Mack, pp.211-212)
 - a. Fitness reports are decisive in an officer's career.
 - b. Fitness reports can influence the efficiency of the entire service.
 - c. Be aware of current standards of marking that prevail in the service.

- d. Some say it is a senior's most important duty.
- e. Be as impersonal as possible.
- f. Do not take it lightly. The task of doing a good job in fitness reports is very challenging for the reporting officer.
- g. The following quote from the Naval Officer's Guide expresses this aspect of responsibility:

When you are making out Fitness Reports, you are alone with a piece of paper, God, and your own conscience. I make it a practice to throw out all partisanship, insofar as is humanly possible, and try to evaluate the officer concerned as accurately as I can, keeping in mind the standard of marks and remarks that prevail in the service today. consider making out these reports the most important single duty that I perform. If I allow myself to be influenced by friendship, because an ineffective young lad has a likeable personality, I do the Navy an injustice. If I allow my personal antipathy for some officer to influence me against him, when he is doing a superior job, I am doing that officer an injustice. I honestly attempt to be impartial. On how well other reporting officers and I succeed depends in a large measure how effective our of icer corps will be. It is our duty to do this job well.

- 3. Discussion of the fitness report with the officer being evaluated (NAVPERS 10848-D, p. 181)
 - a. Navy regulations prohibit inclusion of any adverse matter without giving the officer an opportunity to make a statement concerning the matter.
 - b. It is optional that the reporting officer in the Navy review the reports with the officer concerned (LCDR and above). However, he must show fitness reports to all officers, rank of W-1 through Lieutenant. The reporting officer in the Marine Corps cannot show the actual report, unless it is unsatisfactory in any respect, although he may discuss any shortcoming. If it is unsatisfactory, he must refer the report to the officer reported on. This affords the junior the opportunity to make a statement should he desire, and certify, as required, that he has seen the completed report.
 - c. The value of a senior's discussing a fitness report with the officer reported on is dependent on the considerations covered in Part II, Segment I.

- 4. Meaning of fitness reports to the junior officer (Ageton & Mack, pp. 212-213)
 - a. An evaluation of merits and demerits
 - b. A junior officer may review his reports at the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington. He can learn many lessons about himself. Except in a very unusual case, the reporting senior is sincere and accurate.
 - c. Junior officers learn to look at themselves as others see them, an opportunity not everybody can readily obtain.
 - d. If a junior officer does the job to the best of his ability, tries to do it better, goes out and looks for opportunities, he will not have to worry about his fitness reports; they will take care of themselves.
- E. Preparation of Fitness Reports (NAVPERS 10848-D, pp. 180-181)
 - 1. Schedule of preparation
 - a. Regular periodic reports are submitted annually for lieutenants and above and semi-annually for lieutenants (junior grade) and below.
 - b. Upon completion of temporary duty
 - c. Upon detachment of an officer or his regular reporting senior
 - d. Special cases such as a general court-martial, serious misconduct, or when directed by higher authority
 - 2. The fitness report form, NAVPERS 1611/1, has a worksheet and a smooth report. (Student will be furnished with copies of the Report on Fitness of Officers, NAVPERS 1611/1; the Marine Officer Fitness Report, NAVMC 10147 Rev 6-63.
 - 3. Begin rough reports with the officer's immediate superior and proceed up the chain of command to the reporting senior. (BuPers Inst. 1611.12A)
- F. Selection and Promotion (NAVPERS 10848-D, pp. 184-185)
 - 1. The major principle of Naval officer promotion is that of "promotion by selection", as distinguished from "promotion by seniority."
 - 2. The Secretary of the Navy convenes a selection board (once a year for each grade) and charges it with selection of a specified number of officers for promotion from a list of furnished names.

- 3. The report of the selection board is submitted to the Secretary of the Navy for his recommendation and submitted to the President.
- 4. The grade distribution limits and normal promotion flowrate written into the law are calculated to force attrition at each promotion point from lieutenant through captain.
- 5. Officers who twice fail selection are required by law to be honorably discharged. Lieutenant Commanders, Commanders, and Captains may continue to serve and remain eligible for promotion up to 20, 26, and 30 years of total commissioned service, respectively.

G. Distinction Between USN and USMC Fitness Reports

- 1. The Formats are different.
- 2. Some of the areas evaluated are unique to the particular service.
 - a. USN includes an evaluation of ship handling capabilities by an officer.
 - b. USMC includes an evaluation of the tactical handling of troops by an officer.
